Re: Madison Hunt

Dear Sir or Madam,

On behalf of the Baltimore Lab School Watershed Stewards, I am writing in support of Madison Hunt in applying for a scholarship to help with the cost of college next year. As a Baltimore Lab School student, Madison Hunt has demonstrated academic success and great leadership with her peers.

Throughout her high school years, as a Baltimore Lab School Watershed Steward, Madison completed over 36 hours of classroom training in relevant watershed restoration topics and was involved in an oyster shaking action project. During our annual Island Environmental Science trip, she helped supervise and lead Baltimore Lab School students in hands on learning experiences with the Chesapeake Bay Foundation.

In 2014, as a college student, Maddie became a certified life guard and worked as a counselor at the Salvation Army's Boys and Girls Club in West Virginia. She has obtained the Marshall University Dean's List twice and was invited to join the National Society of Leadership and Success. As a member of this organization, she takes part in different workshops, seminars and lectures.

Madison is currently participating in a service learning project that involves selecting and planting trees that will be most effective at curtailing erosion while helping to remove aluminum from a local polluted creek.

In all of her activities, Madison goes above and beyond the status quo. Her leadership is inspiring. Please award her a scholarship to help with the cost of her continued education.

Sincerely,
Patti Child
